Dear Department of Justice,

I have read the Proposed Final Judgment for the Microsoft Antitrust trial, and I believe that it is best characterized by the phrase "too little too late". I am not a legal expert, but all this proposal seems to be saying to Microsoft is "Hey, don't do this again."

Where is the "justice" in this? What of all the damage Microsoft has done to the competition? Please don't let Microsoft get away with a slap on the wrist! It is not simply a matter of punishment, but rather a matter of assurance that Microsoft will not continue to threaten freedom in the industry and dominate the market through illegal, unethical and uncompetitive ways.

I favor a split up of Microsoft, as proposed earlier. Only splitting up Microsoft into at least three or four companies could assure the breakup of this illegal monopoly. But, I do not believe that the current proposal is sufficient and as a concerned citizen, I am not happy with it and I am asking you to reconsider.
